

Our Pub

Was opened by Keith Galbraith in 1995 as the first producer of Cask Conditioned "Real Ale" in New Zealand for well over 50 years and as such one of the country's craft brewing pioneers. Over the years we have ventured into brewing classic European lager styles and New World beers. However, our focus is producing classic Old World beer styles made fresh here in New Zealand.

Unique Beer

Our traditional British style real ales are brewed using the finest malted barley and whole cone hop flowers from the UK. We are the only New Zealand brewery to be licenced by MPI to import hops in this form. We believe the flavour and aromatic profile of whole hops to be superior to processed hop pellets. Galbraith's real ales are a product of warm open fermentation and long cool natural conditioning in the casks from which they are served. They are unfiltered and unpasteurised and served at 10-12 degrees, typical British cellar temperature. Cool, not ice cold, and never warm. They are served using traditional beer engines or hand-pumps and are neither artificially carbonated nor served under gas pressure. As a result, those not used to the style often use terms like "flat" and "warm". Those of us in on the secret drink a natural product as old as time that has huge depth of flavour, complexity, and depth. This is a style of beer to be sipped, not chugged, and always inspires lively conversation in our pub.
